

Jigsaw is back and has a new and perhaps grander trap planned.

Still on the verge of death as his illness has gotten worse and he is tended to by Amanda. In order to make sure that Jigsaw stays alive long enough to see the end result of his finally trap they bring in a doctor and fit her with a death collar that is controlled by Jigsaw's heartbeat.

I've seen all three Saws now and I have to say that this one is the bloodiest. The traps are more violent and the blood flows freely. I saw that some people thought that they were making it gory for the sake of being gory and that may be true; but it is a horror flick after all. In the end they try and throw you a couple of good twists which many may guess before it happens; but I still really enjoyed it even if they may be reaching at a way to continue the story line without becoming completely out there. Bonus features include commentary by the director, writer, and producers, deleted scenes, a props feature, a traps feature, and the director's diary.

Tags: Saw [1]
Tobin Bell [2]
Donnie Wahlberg [3]
Saw III [4]
Shawnee Smith [5]
Angus Macfadyen [6]
Bahar Soomekh [7]

Source URL: <http://shakefire.com/review/saw-iii>

Links

[1] <http://shakefire.com/tags/saw>
[2] <http://shakefire.com/tags/tobin-bell>
[3] <http://shakefire.com/tags/donnie-wahlberg>
[4] <http://shakefire.com/tags/saw-iii>
[5] <http://shakefire.com/tags/shawnee-smith>
[6] <http://shakefire.com/tags/angus-macfadyen>
[7] <http://shakefire.com/tags/bahar-soomekh>