When I think about blues music, it's usually songs that are a bit on the sad side. Not that blues music is only that, that's just the impression I have of it, songs that are more about loss, missed love, something on the lines of not having the perfect world that you would like to have. There is that style out there for sure, but the new EP, "Only the Sky Knows" by the Tyler Porch Band certainly has a different impression of what blues music is. With their first EP, they have laid down six tracks that are a blues rock beat that gives blues some fun and a more upbeat and uptempo sound.
